Fake CPD?

The term Fake News is a new one to most of us, having come to our attention during the recent US Presidential election. It is also referred to as hoax news, and is not to be confused with satire, because the Fake News strives to mislead, rather than to entertain. Some of the fake news during the 2016 US presidential election season was traced to adolescents in Macedonia, specifically Veles,1 with the Mayor of this town not expressing any anxiety regarding this, as the actions of the Fake News writers was not, he said, against Macedonian law and their finances were taxable. Some of the fake news stories were flanked by advertising by reputable organizations, leading to one such company stating that the company was frustrated, also acknowledging the risk of using automated adverts. All of this is now the subject of a Parliamentary enquiry.

Readers of Dental Update will be aware that the Internet is not peer reviewed, which is why patients may attend our surgeries armed with incorrect or inappropriate information. All of these being good reasons why we should read peer-reviewed journals when we are searching for the answer to a clinical question. Those readers who have carried out a literature critical appraisal exercise at some time during their career will be aware that errors may creep into peer-reviewed journals but, notwithstanding this, the letters to the editor page in subsequent issues generally ‘puts the facts straight’, allowing readers to be made aware of the article’s failings. Richard Simonsen pointed out another positive aspect of peer review, namely that it forces authors to listen to outsiders’ comments, resulting in an improved publication.2 Peer reviewing places a journal in a higher bracket of quality and clinical/scientific accuracy.

However, there is a cost associated with peer reviewing, so it is rare to find free publications which are peer reviewed. It was therefore with astonishment that I recently noticed an advertisement for a non-peer-reviewed, free magazine which was planning to offer Verifiable Continuing Professional Development (CPD) to its readers. I could not work out how something which was not verified by peer review could then offer Verifiable CPD3 (given that the Collins English Dictionary and Thesaurus defines Verify: To prove to be true, to check or determine the correctness or truth…). It seemed counter-intuitive and bizarre in the extreme, a bit like offering CPD on Fake News.

There is an opportunity to put this right. The General Dental Council (GDC) have recently launched a major initiative, Shifting the Balance,4 which looks like it should go some way to restoring its image, as indeed recent contacts with and noises from the GDC have started to do. This initiative is to be welcomed, but it also gives UK Registrants the opportunity, by means of a consultation exercise, to voice their views on the future form that dental CPD in the UK should take. It seems unlikely that the GDC will have the manpower to vet all CPD, so a simpler method is needed. The document states ‘we need to consider how to assure the quality of CPD’, adding ‘guidance to positively incentivise the CPD provider to embed quality assurance methods in their courses/journals’ (journal added by me). For Verifiable CPD via a journal, it is my view that the GDC should recommend CPD from journals which have a peer review process in place: to me, this means quality assurance and peer review. Journal peer reviewing is the only way that we are able to verify the quality of a publication.

For all UK registrants, Shifting the Balance is well worth a read. The GDC is inviting comments on the future shape of UK CPD and the other issues raised in the document, the email address being shiftingthebalance@gdc-uk.org

Post script: For all UK registrants, Shifting the Balance is well worth a read. The GDC is inviting comments on the future shape of UK CPD and the other issues raised in the document, the email address being shiftingthebalance@gdc-uk.org

References

1.  Wikipedia. en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Fake_news website

Authors’ Information

Dental Update invites submission of articles pertinent to general dental practice. Articles should be well-written, authoritative and fully illustrated. Manuscripts should be prepared following the Guidelines for Authors published in the April 2005 issue (additional copies are available from the Editor on request). Authors are advised to submit a synopsis before writing an article. The opinions expressed in this publication are those of the authors and are not necessarily those of the editorial staff or the members of the Editorial Board. The journal is listed in Index to Dental Literature, Current Opinion in Dentistry, MEDLINE & other databases.

Subscription Information

Full UK £107 | Europe £125 | Airmail £155
Retired GDP/Vocational Trainee/DCP £70
Student (Undergraduate) £41 (Foundation Year) £71
10 issues per year
Single copies £18 (Overseas £21.50) | ROW £28
Subscriptions cannot be refunded.

For all changes of address and subscription enquiries please contact:

Dental Update Subscriptions
Mark Allen Group, Unit A 1–5, Dinton Business Park, Catherine Ford Road, Dinton, Salisbury SP3 5HZ
FREEPHONE: 0800 137201
Main telephone (inc. overseas): 01722 716997
E: subscriptions@markallengroup.com

Managing Director: Stuart Thompson
Creative Manager: Lisa Dunbar
Design Creative: Charlotte Skinner

Dental Update is published by: George Warman Publications (UK) Ltd, which is part of the Mark Allen Group.

GEORGE WARMAN PUBLICATIONS (UK) LTD
Unit 2, Riverview Business Park, Walnut Tree Close, Guildford, Surrey GU1 4UX
Tel: 01483 304944, Fax: 01483 303191
email: astroud@georgewarman.co.uk
website: www.dental-update.co.uk

ROYAL COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS OF GLASGOW
'Dental Update' is the official journal of the Dental Faculty of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow. The Dental Faculty of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow offers its Fellows and Members Dental Update as an exclusive membership benefit.

FREEPHONE: 0800 137201

Website: www.dental-update.co.uk
Email: astroud@georgewarman.co.uk
Telephone: 01722 716997
Fax: 01722 716998

DU ISSN 0305-5000